

19:27 Saturday Service to Helensburgh Central

Ain't so loquacious, a bottle of ginger makeshift conversation on the forecourt of the Partick
Interchange

He's got no way with words, hardly G11's answer tae Rabbie Burns Salt 'n' vinegar, not getting in again 'Ah've telt ye once, don't wanna tell ye twice, it's all for your own good'

A carry-out liability, offending the sensibilities of all the ones from the uptown neighbourhoods

19:27 Saturday service to Helensburgh Central

Mental couple arguing over the change for the price of a couple of cans
No place for the wicked on the Saturday service to Helensburgh Central A mandatory face mask and the station tannoy barks the information 'wash your hands, wash your hands'

Juicy fruit getting through it, while staring at the guard to find out once and for all if we're stopping at Carntyne

He's getting to old to be rota-d on for Saturday evening sure he's seen it all before Just past Drumgelloch he bellows from the back of his throat something about fares, Carstairs, past the point of caring

No skin off his nose if the barriers at Charing Cross automatically close

Merrily, merrily, merrily, merrily Coatbridge Sunnyside

Sixteen pounds and ten pence for this roller-coaster ride

And some lass go on a Airdrie and the fella across from me sighed, here's the script

Flick of the wrist, amphetamine-induced twitch

Asking around for the service to take her to the Anderston Street bridge
We all stay quiet too tired to tell her the name of the train that's she's blatantly missed

Half asleep creeping like the devil though the land of half a heavy, you know what I mean,
Queen's Street, low level

It seems fixed schemes, broken dreams, under eighteens don't need a vaccine.

19:27 Saturday service to Helensburgh Central

A pencil pusher's nightmare, a jobsworth's admission of defeat

Oh so clear on the Saturday service to Helensburgh Central Essential understanding in the arbitrary process of getting from A to B.

Nineteen twenty seven, here's your destination, take my hand, take my hand.

Nineteen twenty seven, here's your destination, understand, end of the line

Helensburgh Central, end of the line, end of the line

Helensburgh Central
